KLC Announces CEO Transition and National Search

After an impactful tenure, Dr. Kaye Monk-Morgan is no longer serving as president and CEO of the Kansas Leadership Center.

Among her many accomplishments as president and CEO, Monk-Morgan led record-breaking organizational growth that helped drive exponential impact, grounded in the belief that anyone can lead, anywhere, anytime. Kaye's outstanding work contributed to a leadership framework that is used by organizations across Kansas, all 50 states and more than 70 countries, helping people from every walk of life learn how to mobilize others to make progress on difficult challenges.

"On behalf of our entire board, I want to express our appreciation for the leadership Kaye provided in growing our programs, reaching more people, and advancing the common good in communities near and far," said Pete Najera, board chair of the Kansas Leadership Center. "We are grateful for her many contributions to the field of adaptive leadership and wish her nothing but success in her future endeavors."

KLC's mission and work continue. The organization remains focused on inspiring and equipping people, together, to do difficult things for the common good. Its programs, partnerships, journalism, research and commitments continue.

In the interim, Amy Williams, chief growth officer, will manage the daily operations of the organization to maintain business continuity and ensure a seamless and well-coordinated transition for the next CEO.

The Kansas Leadership Center board of directors will soon begin a national search for KLC's next president and CEO and will share additional information as the process gets underway.

About the Kansas Leadership Center

The Kansas Leadership Center (KLC) is a first-of-its-kind nonprofit educational organization with a civic mission, national reputation and global reach. Founded in 2007 with core funding from the Kansas Health Foundation, KLC's mission is to inspire and equip people, together, to do difficult things for the common good. KLC partners with other nonprofits, government agencies, educational institutions, businesses, philanthropies, and communities to build cultures that are mobilized to make progress on their toughest challenges and thrive. Its publications include leadership books available from Bard Press, Third Floor Research, an applied research center with the Staley School of Leadership at Kansas State University, and The Journal, a nationally recognized, award-winning civic issues magazine.

Over the past 19 years, KLC has built a strong and respected institution in Kansas designed to deliver leadership development and culture change at unparalleled scale. Now, organizations across the country and around the world look to us to provide resources and consultation to support their own aspirations for mission-driven leadership education.
